INTRODUCTION

Your success in any job depends on the value of your contribution to the organization. Managers, mentors and professional coaches can encourage, advise and guide you as you grow professionally. However, the ultimate responsibility for your career development is yours and yours alone.

This report is designed to assist you in managing and developing your career. For many jobs, soft skills are as important as technical skills in producing superior performance. Soft skills are often transferable to different jobs, whereas technical skills are usually more specific.

Based on your responses to the Personal Soft Skills Indicator™ questionnaire, this report indicates your mastery of 23 soft skills. These 23 soft skills contribute to superior performance in many jobs. Your mastery of these soft skills are categorized into three levels:

- 1) Mastered
- 2) Some Mastery
- 3) Not Yet Mastered

While soft skills are certainly important for career development, it is not necessary to master every one. In fact, mastery of a soft skill may not benefit your career if it isn't required in your current job. In order to optimize your career potential, it is best to focus your development efforts on the soft skills that are required in your current job, or the job you want.

Be sure to read the entire report with an open mind. Everyone has areas where they can improve. Before deciding to work on developing soft skills you have not yet mastered or have some mastery of, you may want to discuss the report with a trusted peer, mentor or professional coach. You may even wish to share the report with your manager. In most cases, management takes a very positive view of individuals who wish to develop their skills.

MASTERY INDICATOR

This section of your report shows your mastery level of 23 soft skills based on your responses to the questionnaire. The 23 soft skills have been categorized into three levels: Mastered, Some Mastery, and Not Yet Mastered.
